

Danced Night of Slaying*MURDER PROBE WITNESS.

Marie Anderson (above) told authorities of Prairie du Chien, Wis., she danced with Erdman Olsen the night Clare Olsen, his sweetheart, disappeared from her farm home. Olsen, sought throughout the country on a charge of murdering the girl, is believed to have fled to New York. (P. & A.)

Salm Keeps Close Watch at Trial

LUCKY PRINCE.

UNFADING SMILES

DIVORCE DISCLOSES MARRIAGE.

Sally Long (above) had only one hubby and two children when Flo Ziegfeld put her in the "Follies" and insured her against marriage for $100,000. Flo didn't know Sally was married at 15 to Leo D. Tuey, but her divorce from him yesterday let every one in on the secret. (Photo Graphic.)
